David A. Sloane and Howard M. Stein are partners in Certilman Balin Adler & Hyman LLP's real estate practice group.

Sloane also manages the firm's Suffolk County office. Certilman Balin merged with his firm, Mars, Sloane & Conlon in 2001.

Sloane represents major developers, national home builders and national retailers in the areas of commercial real estate, zoning and land use.

Stein, who is managing partner of the real estate practice group in East Meadow, concentrates on matters related to real property acquisitions, leasing, real estate finance and loan workouts.

Stein represented the Holiday Organization in the sale of the Melville pumpkin farm to Canon for their North American headquarters in what could be the largest land sale on LI, and was instrumental in resolving the legal dispute that will keep Canon on LI.

Zoning restrictions and restrictions contained in recorded covenants must be dealt with properly, Sloane said. "In order to properly protect a buyer, the contract must contain provisions that neither of these restrictions prohibit the present structures and uses on the property, or limit the purchasers intended use of same," Sloane said.

Sloane is a former special town attorney to the Town of Brookhaven, a member of the Suffolk County Bar Association, the Real Estate Law Committee, Environmental Law Committee and Municipal Law Committee of the NYS Bar Association, and an active member of the Long Island Builders Institute. He also serves on the advisory board of Chicago Title Insurance Company.

Sloane earned a bachelor's degree from Tufts University and a juris doctor and master of laws in taxation from NY University. He is a member of the NYS and Federal Bars.

Certilman Balin Adler & Hyman is one of LI's largest full-service law firms with more than 80 attorneys.
